Every failure lands on a customer. The customers at the top of this chart are the ones owed an apology call — and the ones most likely to be quietly sourcing a second supplier. What has to go out and when. The overdue bucket should be empty; anything in it is a promise already broken and a phone call owed. What has to go out and when. The overdue bucket should be empty; anything in it is a promise already broken and a phone call owed.

Where your dispatch volume actually goes. A mix concentrated on one carrier is a cut-off time and a single point of failure worth knowing about. Where your dispatch volume actually goes. A mix concentrated on one carrier is a cut-off time and a single point of failure worth knowing about.

Notes

Sample log — replace every shipment with your own before relying on it or circulating it.

OTIF here is measured at dispatch — a shipment counts as on time when it left on or before the promised ship date, not when the customer received it. That is an honest measure of your dispatch discipline, but it is not proof of delivery; carrier transit failures happen after this log's line of sight. The delivered status closes the loop when you have confirmation. Quantities, dates and paperwork are only as accurate as what is entered, and this log is an internal record, not a contractual delivery document, a customs declaration or proof of export.
